The Telegraph Line

Hon. F. W. Aylmer has Instructions to Commence Work.

World of an authentic nature has reached here that Hon. F. W. Aylmer has been placed in charge of the construction of the telegraph line from Golden into this district, and that he has instructions from Ottawa to proceed with the work at once. We have also been informed that already Mr. Aylmer is preparing to commence work and that he will push it with all possible speed. It would be a difficult matter for the Government to have selected a man more adapted to the work than Mr. Aylmer and that a good serviceable line will be constructed it is scarcely necessary to point out.

This is good news for everyone in this district as telegraphic communication is badly needed, and will tend greatly to facilitate all commercial and other business. Especially will it aid mining operators to carry on negotiations and keep in touch with their companies. It will also assist materially in disseminating the news of this district to the outside world and enable the Operator to give our readers news while it is hot.

LETTER FROM OUR SOLDIER

Northway Writes From far South Africa

The following letter was received in James McKay, who has kindly allowed the Operator to publish it: Olympia, B. C., October 26, 1900.

Dear Jim:—As I have a little spare time I am writing off a few letters. We are at present still in the country, but our duty here is to build a bridge over the river, it is the largest and most important in the Delago Bay. We have a good deal of night duty as the Boers are likely any night to attack and blow up the bridge.

We would all like to be home with our families and to be able to do our own work. We have done our duty in different places, and in some we were shot at nearly every day.

I have been in more fights than I can remember. We were all out during the fighting on the way up to Pretoria. After the occupation of that town we were through the big fight at Diamond Hill. The ammunition for the artillery went away there and for nearly a day we held on to our position by rifle fire. A battle of our consequence never is spread out for so long. Our fighting line must have extended over 15 to 20 miles at Diamond Hill. Some of the artillery in our range from six to eight miles and one of the guns took from 15 to 20 men to draw them into action.

Our brigade of mounted riflemen—Hunters and Frenchie's cavalry—generally got a lot of punishment from the Boers before the infantry and our heavy artillery could get away. Sometimes we fought for two days before being driven and then the Boers chased us. They had the railway behind them and their big guns were very heavy for us from the track so they got loaded them up on a flat car and skinned back 30 or 40 miles, blowing up the bridges and destroying the track as they went.

It was a great sight to see our army advancing on Pretoria. We were generally so far ahead of the infantry that we did not offend the main body. When we did get a sight, the transports and guns seemed endless. They say a man could start on an engine house at the rear and ride back for two days before he could get past the unloading of troops, artillery and transport. After that the line was beaten out of what he could see on an engine house at the rear and ride back for two days before he could get past the unloading of troops, artillery and transport.

After that the line was beaten out of what he could see on an engine house at the rear and ride back for two days before he could get past the unloading of troops, artillery and transport.

I have been in. For three hours the rifle fire was one steady roar. All at once they quit and an hour or two after midnight silence arrived, but the Boers were all out of reach.

Our horses stand this country better than any. I have mine still, one of the few survivors. I had to buy, buy and steal grub for him to keep him; often he got my ration of biscuit. The North West men too have had less sickness than any other troops and we have caught it with the best. Our horses have never been even in tents since we left Cape Town.

Your sincere friend,
Brenton Southway.

The B. C. Mining Exchange and Investors' Union will issue a Special B. C. and Klondike Number. This issue will contain articles, both well known and little known, of an interesting and important nature, dealing with the progress of the mining industry both in British Columbia and the Klondike, and our future possibilities. The most important workings and mines will also be referred to, and will also contain an interesting account of a trip to the Golden North, giving the writer's experience of a shipwreck, etc.

Several other interesting articles dealing with our economics, such as the coal etc., will also add to its importance, as also a reference to what has been the want of enterprise.

The whole will be profusely illustrated. The exchange will present a copy of this special issue to all who pay their subscriptions previous to Jan. 1st, 1901.

FRED COLLINS IS ILL

Mental Condition Unimproved.

Harry Munson, Peterson, returned from a trip to Golden on Monday. He is reported as saying that he visited Fred Collins, who is held in the Golden Jail charged with the murder of Arthur Dunn, and that Fred has got very thin since his confinement. He further stated that he does not believe that Collins will live very long, and that he appears to be in a worse condition mentally than when he left Peterson on October 11th. This being true, there can be no doubt but that he committed the crime when insane, and that for this reason.

The Operator has received a copy of the Woodstock, Ont., Daily Express, which contains a full account of the preliminary trial as it appeared in those columns some weeks ago. Fred Collins relates live in Woodstock, where they are highly respected, and where a great deal of interest is taken in the affair.

Harry Hughes is said to be in Rosland now.

R. A. Kimpton returned from a trip to the coast last week.

There is no truth in the report that R. J. Scott, S. M., is to be married shortly.

P. Patmore has gone up the creek to check over for Capt. Armstrong and the Parolites.

The political scrap is now practically between Gallier and Foley. And these Bullard or Clarks will strike for a Port Foley.

We regret that our Golden correspondents have neglected to send the usual Golden Nuggets, but hope they will make up for it next week.

F. A. Mulholland leaves by today's stage for Golden, en route to Toronto. He will return next April and intends to bring his family with him.

Hugh Gordon's fortune and has been engaged by Capt. Armstrong to hold the entire title and land in Columbia river mining. Jasper Leavie will be the ribbon.

The Operator's department is complete in every particular and turns out first class work. See the long list of testimonials, billboards, evidence, business cards, etc., and we will give you good work at reasonable prices.

Mr. MacNeil, the Conservative Candidate, has been the uselessness of continuing the campaign, and has been put out in favor of John McKenna, a Rosland mine owner. John is a very good fellow, but has made a mistake in entering the political arena at this late date especially, and even under ordinary circumstances would have a hard fight for victory.

Ask Edouard Cameron if the people desire to elect the Operator. When Mr. Cameron arrived here he had a letter of introduction to see editor, which stated that his name was Hector Cameron. Spring has published it that Mr. Cameron was great. Hector is nearly all his time and from his friends generally. His proper name is Edouard Cameron.

Ledge Croppings

Happenings of Interest Among Treasure Vaults.

Tom Good, Frank Anderson and another miner, who came down from the Paradise mine last week suffering considerably from being holed, have imposed very much under Dr. Elliott's care and already Frank Anderson has returned to the mine.

Messrs. Fraser and Washburn, who have a contract for 50 feet of tunneling on the Marie Group, located near the Silver Tip, have returned. They report that the showing in the Marie is a good one and improving. There is right foot of rock at the mine and they had a rough trip down through the snow, it took them five days.

Marion Group.

A short time since a representative of the Operator, while on a trip to Tolly Creek visited two prominent claims owned by Messrs. Washburn, Power, Fraser and Martin. The first exposure of the Marion and Martin mineral claims is located at the forks of Tolly and the main Tolly. This is a good exposure property, the lead, which has been exposed for about 50 feet by stripping and exposure, shows up four right foot of rock to two feet of ore, showing the formation and is at a higher level. Away from the creek, the lead is a 30 to 50 feet exposure, showing up four right foot of rock to two feet of ore.

Charlemont.

The second group is situated just across Tolly creek and up the mountain about 200 feet from the Marion group. It is owned by the Charlemont, Charlene and 1 and 2 and 3 and 4. The Charlemont with which enters the formation at right angles and dips to the east, a shallow lead property. The outcrop being several hundred feet long, exposing from 10 to 14 inches of ore, ore assaying 100 pounds silver and 60 per cent lead.

The Charlemont which adjoins the Charlene has an outcrop of about 200 feet and has been assayed, but as similar ore is also exposed, all there is no doubt but that this will.

To the left of the outcrop about 40 feet is another very outcropping for over 200 feet, showing up four right foot of rock. This is a concentrating property and nature has done much to show it. There being a perpendicular break of over 200 feet, through which the ore passes and can be seen to the top of the mountain from the base of the cliff where there stands out for perhaps 100 feet and 12 feet high, four feet of ore, ore assaying 100 pounds silver and 60 per cent lead.

While we have always had the utmost faith in the camp, yet after seeing these properties we were much more than ever convinced that we need capital for development.

THE PARADISE

1000 Tons of Ore to be Hauled

Capt. Armstrong made the Operator a very pleasant call on Saturday last and reported everything at the Paradise mine going along most satisfactorily. He said that ore shafts were being erected 2000 feet which would be increased as found necessary, and that 2000 tons of ore were being taken out daily, with an average of about 17 tons a ton.

By next week he thought ore would be coming down the spring creek at the rate of about 20 tons a day, and about the same amount to Columbia river. A winter bridge position will be put in at the Paradise landing. The river at this point is about 30 feet wide and a snow 25 feet has been placed in the middle of the stream and the remaining 25 feet will be bridged over sufficiently strong to carry ore. The Paradise people are awaiting the Captain in the erection of the bridge as it will give direct connection with the eastern portion of the valley and enable railroads to cut off several miles in reaching Peterboro. The bridge will necessitate the building of a road to connect with the road constructed by the Government on the east side during the summer. By crossing the river with the ore it will materially aid in loading it on to the steamers in the spring when the time arrives to take it down the river.

The Captain expects to bring down not less than two tons of ore during the winter from the Paradise. It is also likely that he will bring down considerable ore from the Silver Tip before the spring, although arrangements have not been concluded as yet.

Isaac Tombs, an Indian, came into Atholm last Sunday, and reported that he had killed 25 deer.

The imaginary telephone system has been the cause of many a stupid fight for one or two dollars.

It is reported that the Indians have slaughtered about 500 sheep, creek and they are sold by the bush at 10 cents. Would the white man be he should do likewise?

The Windermere Christmas tree promises to excite all who are given on the most and every thing possible is being done to make it a pleasant and successful affair. Thursday evening, Dec. 20th, has been the date set for its removal.

Salute for the Tax Operator. J. A. Kirk, the enterprise operator, has been a success agent, narrowly escaped a serious accident on Saturday last. He was engaged in the sawmill and while passing the sawmill he fell slipped on a board, causing him to fall from a great height with the saw, cutting the side of his forehead and shoe off from just above the heel and leaving his neck at the base.

A Van Cortlandt has been keeping Police Officer Gledhill's company for several days. Van Cortlandt is a very handsome man, well built, and improved in health, now, however, and will likely be released in a day or two.

This St. Andrew's dinner to be given in the Hotel Canterbury tomorrow evening promises to be a splendid success and will be a search of all. Being well improved in health, now, however, and will likely be released in a day or two.

THURSDAY, NOV. 29, 1900.

A week from today is election day in this constituency and from all we can learn Chris Foley will be the favorite in this particular district. A lively canvass has been made throughout the valley in his behalf, while there has been nothing done to secure votes for the other candidates.

The Liberals in this constituency have great confidence in winning the election next Thursday, and are very cocky because of the unanimous way the entire Dominion has returned to power the Laurier Government. They must not rest on their oars, however, for the standing of this constituency is hard to estimate owing to its vastness and the great increase in population. Besides it must be remembered that the labor candidates were in favor in the late Provincial elections.

The Secretary of the Bureau of Provincial Information writes the Outcrop: "In view of the proposed early re-organization of the Agent General's Office, London, Eng., I am instructed to make a collection of photographs illustrative of the Province at large. Representative views of mining, agriculture, lumbering, fishing, shipping, public works and buildings, business blocks and residences, churches, schools, scenery, etc., etc., are desired. I write to solicit your co-operation in securing such views as may be available respecting your big district. Good, clear, well finished photographs—not less in size than 8x12 if possible—are wanted, and at as early a date as possible. As the appropriation available is limited donations of such views will always be appreciated; but where expense on the part of the Government is necessary to be incurred a memo of the estimated cost of pictures, with a list of subjects, should be first submitted to the Bureau, when a selection will be made, and authority given for their purchase."

In reference to the above letter the Outcrop would be pleased to press upon those interested

The Blackguard

A Trail Blazer Story of Life in This Valley.

"We've tried, sir," Mr. Fraser Gage met an inquiring glance from the Colonel. "We gave this gentleman your tent with some of our bedding but when he tried to turn in last night he fell foul of one of the Quartermaster's sheep lashed to the cot. Mr. Ramsay says he was kicked half-way across the parade ground."

"I must say," the Colonel tried to be grave, "I had some misgivings when I met La Mancha just now. He was that eager-fall innocent of expression which always means some fresh outrage."

"I promise you, Mr. Ramsay, that he shall have occasion to repent."

"Yes—I wouldn't be hard on him, but you know, I'm sure it was only."

The Englishman was genuine now, and that despite his airs and graces the Colonel liked him. Even the mere water-coupling with a wooden face behind showed a glance of escape of intellect, appreciation, and the senior inspector noting it, was glad that news of this for mercy would reach the troops.

The Colonel changed the subject. "Well, Mr. Ramsay, how do you like our mountains?"

Again the Tenderfoot fell into needless embarrassment, until little Gage came to his relief.

"Mr. Ramsay turned up last night, sir, on horseback." The Subaltern could not refrain from grinning at the remembrance. "He's got business at the Throne Camp, so I took the liberty of promising."

"A man to show him the way, eh? Quite right. Mr. Ramsay is welcome. Also's Orderly Officer? Oh! Then Mr. Fraser Gage will detail a good man—and now."

The Colonel rose, seeming sorely to have taken more than a cup of coffee, and with a glance drew the senior Subaltern to his own tent, where he received a full report of events during his absence.

"Get rid of that young fad," was his last instruction before closing the interview. "If you let him stay in camp, another day I shall have to punish the men for practical jokes. Get rid of him before noon."

"Regimental Number 1107, Constantine La Mancha," the Colonel read from a sheet of blue ledger, "you are charged with having on the night of the 2nd instant, been drunk."

The Blackguard nodded.

"You are further charged with having, on the same instant, acted contrary to the discipline of the Force, in that you did cruelly ill-treat an animal—namely, a sheep."

The Blackguard nodded.

"You are further charged with having used insulting and abusive language to the Sergeant of the guard."

The Blackguard smiled. "I told him to—"

"Silence!" said the Sergeant-Major sternly.

The Colonel laid down the charge-sheet with a gesture of weariness.

"Have you anything to say for yourself?"

"It's all correct, sir."

"You have no excuse or apology?"

"None, sir."

"Constantine La Mancha, are you aware that your detainer sheet is not only the blackest in the Force?"

The Blackguard answered with a smile of innocent frankness which would have disarmed a grizzly bear.

"In four months from now your time expires, otherwise, for continuous misbehaviour, I should be compelled to recommend your discharge. I cannot have my whole division demoralized by one"—he was going to say "blackguard!" Consider this matter. Fined one month's pay."

The Blackguard smiled.

"Thank you, sir."

"Right about turn, said the Sergeant-Major. "Quick march!"

Then the Colonel chuckled. Presently he looked up at the senior Inspector.

"Have you seen to Mr. Ramsay?"

"I'm afraid, sir, that I have only one duty man available who knows the trail."

"You mean La Mancha? Hum!—I wish we had a dozen men as useful. Well, never mind the rules—he's safe occupied."

The Inspector spoke to the Orderly Sergeant, who left the tent saluting.

"Blackguard," he said, overtaking the culprit, "get a job for you. Pack your horse and Polly. You're to take that Tenderfoot up to the Throne Mine. Report before lights out tomorrow, and see you don't 'mushy him' anywhere."

CHAPTER IV.

An hour later, when the sun was high in the heavens, Mr. Ramsay, attired in a "common soldier," set out in state westward for the Black Mountain. The Englishman's feelings were mixed, firstly with admiration for the common soldier's ease in the saddle, for his own black charger, standing seven hands, seemed as a dry horse, the senior carrying animal in B Division, for the light weighed down at one side with a "good-son service revolver, and glittering all across his back with its twenty cartridges of lamplight brass like a cer-
